Gidday Pete,

Can you send me that CCTV footage? This is the fourth time I've emailed you mate and I know you're working all hours but it's a quick job and will help me sort out this insurance bizzo. It's really stressing me out.

ACCESS REQUESTS DON'T NEED TO SHOW HARM

Thanks mate,

Derek Chang

SHOWS FOLLOW UP

Kia ora Derek,

Thank you for your email reminder and my apologies for taking so long. Peter has been flat out in the pit since Gary quit and I'm helping out by taking over some of the office work for him. I've attached all the information we have about you between Tuesday 22 April and Saturday 26 April, which looks like your email about the crash, a worksheet showing the work that Peter did on your Holden, along with his notes to the panel beater when we sent it off there.

I hope that helps with the insurance claim and gets things cleared up for you.

Nga mihi,
Chyanne.

Peter,

My insurance company are making life hard and I need all the information you've got about me so I can prove recent work on the V8 was part of that accident in Whangamata last summer.

While you're at it can you flick me the CCTV tape showing me coming in after the accident?

I came in on Tuesday end of April. So I need the information about me between Tuesday 22 April and Saturday 26 April and any CCTV that shows me in it between 10am Tuesday 22 April and 12pm that day.

DEREK HAS NARROWED DOWN THE DATES AND TIMES

You did me a solid mate getting that job tidied up fast.

Note

- Derek was sensible, clear, and concise about asking for his information, and for CCTV.
- He focused on the dates he needed them for.
- Access requests (asking for your own information) don't need to prove harm.
- Derek has shown an entire email string that shows who he emailed, what he said, and on which dates.
